COW CANYON TRADING POST

Cow Canyon Trading Post, built in the late 40's - early 50's, was brought back to life by owner Liza Doran and family in 1986.

It's a beautiful old building with a whole lot of soul. This handsomely restored post with its rough-hewn vigas and squeaky wooden floors charms everyone.

The Art of Navajo, Zuni, Hopi, and Bluff locals is carefully curated and displayed, representing the best work in about a 300-mile radius.

Collections include:

- Historic Navajo weaving
- Zuni Jewelry and fetishes
- Mud toys of Rose Herbert and Elsie Benally
- Wooden Sand Paintings by Thomas Begay
- Memory Aides by Dennis Hathale
- The Jewelry of Lois Young
- And much more

"Cow Canyon art is great. It reflects Liza's eye for authenticity, creativity, and beautiful forms."

---Sally Cole, Rock Art Researcher

"Trading posts are about people, their interactions, influences, support, and our interdependence. This one is real. Come be a part of it."

--Liza Doran, Curator, Owner, Chief Bottle Washer
